PATIENT STORIES

Introduction

After an extremely successful trial of the AlterG Anti-Gravity Treadmill, The Merlin MS Centre purchased the treadmill in May 2016. Since then their users have continued to see the benefits of exercising, walking and even running with the assistance of differential air-pressure.

"We have had an amazing response from our service users who have given this revolutionary gravity-defying equipment a go. There have been a few tears of joy and sheer excitement at the feeling of running or walking for the first time in years."

Melissa King- Head of Therapy Services at The Merlin MS Centre

Patients

David, 70

David, 70 suffered a stroke in October 2014. Following his first couple of sessions on the treadmill, he noticed a huge difference:

"Before my stroke, I played sport and had been fit. The treadmill let me run for the first time in five years. It gave me confidence to do things I felt I couldn't before. Even after the first session my wife noticed my walking stride was extended and I was no longer shuffling."

David, 53

David, age 53, who has spinal problems, arthritis and MS said:

"It made me feel like a normal person again. I really struggle with walking, but I was able to run on the machine."

Ben Marshall, 65:

Ben, who was diagnosed with Multiple Sclerosis 12 years ago, has run for the first time in years by using the revolutionary treadmill.

Mr Marshall, has been on the Anti-Gravity Treadmill twice and stated:

"It was fantastic to get that feeling of running again – like running on air. I hope to see improvements in my balance as my walking becomes more assured"
