Applications of AlterG's Anti-Gravity Treadmill

We have found that a large range of patients are benefiting from using the treadmill including those with spinal injury, brain injury, stroke, MS, back pain and OA patients as well as children who have been using it for rehabbing post-surgery.

Benefits delivered by AlterG's Anti-Gravity Treadmill

Nothing else does what the Anti-Gravity Treadmill does. It's like a hydrotherapy pool but without the need for water in terms of the buoyancy effect and support. The Anti-Gravity Treadmill allows accelerated rehabilitation with patients that have to be partial weight-bearing or on a protected rehab programme. It's of great benefit to post arthroplasty patients to allow to them to move without the use of crutches and sticks and without limping. It's particularly useful for patients who have had bilateral simultaneous surgery.

How has the Anti-Gravity Treadmill benefited your NHS facility?

Greatly. We've received some excellent publicity since it was installed and it has given the Physiotherapy Department a better profile.

We've also had a lot of referrals specifically for the Anti-Gravity Treadmill as a component of treatment.

I am really pleased we bought the Anti-Gravity Treadmill and I am excited about the addition of the hoist we have just ordered as there are some less able patients that have been unable to access the machine but they will now be able to.

Funds to purchase the Anti-Gravity Treadmill were provided by the Hospital League of Friends charity

Testimonials

"The use of AlterG Anti-Gravity Treadmills by top athletes is interesting. But the most compelling thing about their products is the huge ramification for the elderly and the obese. My mother died in late 2010 from complications of pulmonary disease, and I saw the cascading effects that a life of inactivity can cause. So, it's a completely unique company in serving not only world-class athletes, but also those who need a safe environment to regain or retain mobility."
